Project Spotlight: Missouri State Fairgrounds Womans Building

Contractor: Prost Builders Inc.

Project Overview:

The Womans Building on the Missouri State Fairgrounds in Sedalia, Missouri was built in 1910 as a rest area for women and their children while they attended the fair. Currently, the building hosts exhibits during the fair and is available to rent for private events throughout the rest of the year. It is home to the Missouri State Fairgrounds Museum and Gift Shop.

In 2015, the State of Missouri passed legislation to repair and upgrade the aging building, with work awarded to Prost Builders Inc. out of Jefferson City, Missouri and to be completed in 2018. Prost Builders contracted with Chicago Lumber Commercial Services to provide aluminum clad-wood windows that met the State of Missouri's strict historical requirements.

After a thorough review of the project requirements and based on an extensive physical examination of the existing windows, Chicago Lumber Commercial Services was able to provide Marvin Clad-Wood Double Hung units with factory applied exterior casing. These windows closely replicated the historic details of the original windows in an energy efficient and low maintenance product.

Special Considerations:

Due to the historical nature of the building and the fact that modifications have been made to the structure during the last 100 years, each opening type was significantly different. We were able to provide windows that integrated seamlessly into each existing opening while still visibly matching the other windows on the project.
